ALBANIAN IN "DICTIONARY OF LANGUAGES"

In the "Dictionary of Languages", published by Columbia University Press in New York, 1998, among the 400 languages of the world is included the Albanian language, as one of the oldest Indo-European languages.

The Albanian language, says Andrew Dalby, forms a special branch of Indo-European languages, quite different in its development from Greek and other modern neighboring languages. It is the official language of Albania spoken by most of the inhabitants of Kosovo, Montenegro, South Serbia, minorities long established in Italy and Greece as well as millions of Albanians living all over the world.
